Renowned Exchange 2007 Expert Joins ENow

[Orange, CA – Friday, 9 May 2008]

ENow Inc, innovative leaders in deploying Microsoft Exchange 2007 solutions, today announced that renowned Exchange 2007 expert Andy Grogan has joined the company.

Andy Grogan has been deploying messaging solutions with Microsoft Exchange since the products beta. During this period, Andy has deployed Microsoft Exchange to over 165,000 seats and 9,000 customers. In addition to being a renowned Exchange expert, Andy believes in giving back to the Exchange community. He regularly spends time writing technical articles that assist exchange administrators all around the world.

Originally, Andy started out as an IT manager for a large Senior school in London, where in addition to his technical duties he also taught the programming elements of the Advanced Level Computer Science qualification using Object Pascal. Andy next joined one of London's largest Local Government Borough's as the deputy manager of the Schools IT support service. During this period his team looked after 900 customers spread across 80 geographically separate locations.

Andy has recently focused his energies on Exchange 2007 as more and more companies are recognizing the benefits that the new message platform brings. Currently Andy has deployed over 25,000 seats of Exchange 2007 and is currently working on a migrating a customer that has in excess of 150, 000 seats to a CCR high availability implementation of Exchange 2007.

ENow is excited about adding yet another messaging expert to its growing team. Andy will be serving as a Technical Evangelist, helping ENow further offer expert assistance to organizations looking to deploy Microsoft Exchange technologies.
